II.

GOLDEN LEAVES FROM THE BRITISH POETS.

Extract from the Preface to "Golden Leaves from the Dramatic Poets."

In the Dramatic Poets a number of poems are embodied the lightest efforts of its genius. Our series of "GOLDEN LEAVES from the BRITISH AND AMERICAN POETS" would be, therefore, incomplete without a collection of specimens from the Dramatic Poets of those countries. In the present volume we give selections of recognized beauties from the BRITISH AND AMERICAN DRAMATISTS, arranged in chronological order, commencing with the earliest known drama in the English language, and continuing the series down to the present time. The collection, we trust, will be found interesting to the student of dramatic literature, as exhibiting in a condensed form the mutations in taste, style, and method of treatment which the drama has undergone through the last three centuries. We believe it will also be acceptable to lovers of the legitimate drama who still cling to the recollections of the past glories of the stage, and will receive and welcome these souvenirs of the cherished favorites of their youth."

The "Golden Leaves" series are uniform in size, style, and price. The convenient size of the volumes, the beauty of the page, the elegance of their external appearance, unite in commanding them to persons of taste and culture. They are put up in sets, boxes, but are also sold separately. Price per each volume, $2 50. Mailed post-free on receipt of price.

Have just ready:

L. MY NEW HOME, by the author of "Win and Wear," 16 mo. Illustrated. $1 25.

White and Black History as the history of two families, one that feared God and one that feared Him not, with the results of the two systems of education, in a most graphic and fascinating story.

The author of this book is to me its continuous flow of most serious and impressive thought. I would not hesitate to compare the last chapter with any I had read from Bushnell's "Great Law," or from Lewes' "The Author."

III. THE INTUITIONS OF THE MIND, indutively investigated by James McEachan, LL.D. New and revised edition. $2 50.

As this book has the rare and insatiable desire for constructive thought, not contenting himself with taking the dimensions, or even repairing the flaws, of other men's buildings; but raising ther after of solid masses on his own foundation. The work on "The Intuitions of the Mind" is to be recommended to all who desire to penetrate the subtle and secret combination used to sustain the philosophical system of Scotland since the days of Reid.—Peter Baynes in the Edinburgh Witness.
